If you have a large dog, you might think a pet door is out of the question. After all, do people even make pet doors that large? If you have a Rottweiler, Great Dane, St. Bernard, Pyrenees, Irish Wolfhound, Bullmastiff, Leonbergers or other large dog, there is good news; Pet Door Products can make pet doors for nearly every size of dog and the dog doors can be installed right into your sliding glass door. These doggie doors are sturdy, energy-efficient, and won't crack or rust. They can take 200 pounds of dog weight and keep going strong. If security is a concern, pet doors come with an optional security plate to keep out any unwanted intruders when the door is not in use, just in case your extra-large dog is not enough of a deterrent.

Benefits of Doggie Doors

- Dogs can take their own potty breaks. No more depending on you to let them out.
- Pets don't have to scratch and whine at the door. Scratching on the door can do some real damage. When dogs have their independence, they don't need to whine to remind you that it's their turn for a potty break.
- Less accidents means less clean-up for you.
- More independence and exercise. Dogs love being outside. Now they can enjoy the great outdoors at their own pace.
- When you have a dog door, you have more choices about where your dog can go and where it can't.

- Your sliding glass door works like normal. as it should.

Measuring Your Pet for a Large Dog Door

When you have a proper dog door for your large dog, it allows him room to roam without hurting himself. As he gets older, this will allow him more freedom and mobility. Here are the following steps to measure for a dog door:

- Determine flap width: This is how wide you want your dog door to be. Open your sliding glass door just wide enough to let your dog through. Add a couple more inches, and you have your flap width.
- Measure for height: Measure from the floor to where your dog's back and neck meet, right above the shoulder. Remember dogs can duck their heads, so you do not have to measure up to their heads.
